WEATHER KEY POINTS

10/16/19 - 10/22/19

Wednesday

- Drier and warmer conditions, combined with weak to locally moderate offshore flow, will bring elevated fire weather conditions to portions of Southern Region
- A cold front will bring precipitation to the northern third of the state on Wednesday, especially in the Coastal Region, but no significant impacts are expected

Thursday-Saturday

- A series of cold fronts will continue to bring periods of precipitation to the northern half of the state, but no weather or water impacts are expected
- Gusty Sundowner winds are expected for southern Santa Barbara County Thursday through Sunday with elevated fire weather conditions possible

Sunday-Tuesday

- Critical fire weather conditions could develop Sunday across Southern Region and continue into early next week, especially for the mountains and valleys
  - A weak Santa Ana wind event is possible Sunday through Tuesday. Confidence is still low as to the strength of the event but at this time is expected to be much weaker than the event last week.
